Kraken Bug Bounty program patches isolated bug

- As part of our ongoing commitment to enhance the overall security of the crypto ecosystem, we're informing the crypto community that we have patched an isolated bug in our deposit and funding systems.
- No client assets were impacted or vulnerable leading up to this disclosure. Kraken has fixed the bug.
- The bug was initially discovered by a third-party security research company who had exploited the flaw for financial gain before reporting it to Kraken's Bug Bounty program. This flaw allowed certain users, for a short period of time, to artificially increase the value of their Kraken account balance without fully completing a deposit.
- On discovery, a cross-functional effort at Kraken mitigated the issue in less than an hour. We then thoroughly tested the solution to guard against similar issues in the future.
- Unfortunately, the third-party researchers that discovered the bug acted in bad faith and outside the rules of our established Bug Bounty program, which has been in operation for nearly a decade. Bug bounty program industry best practices generally involve careful collaboration between both parties, with security researchers expected to:
    - Exploit only what is needed to prove a security vulnerability
    - Promptly return assets that have been extracted
    - Provide details of testing, such as proof-of-concept code, that allows the company to assist with the identification and remediation of the underlying flaw
- We won't be crediting the researcher of this disclosure because they didn't comply with any of these industry expectations.
- Learn more about Kraken Security Labs and our bug bounty program on our blog

Elevated home & portfolio experience

- We've made numerous changes and improvements to the consumer web experience.
- Consumer web now has a separate portfolio page.
  - A new balance chart has been added to this page showing account value over time
  - Assets are grouped by categories (cash, stablecoins, crypto, NFTs, etc.)
  - Deposit and withdraw buttons make it easy to move your assets
  - The rewards card has been relocated from the homepage to the new portfolio page
- Watchlist cards were previously only available in the consumer app but are now also available on the home section of the website

API

REST & Websocket updates

REST

- Added 'cl_ord_id' parameter to the order endpoints: AddOrder, CancelOrder, AddOrderBatch and CancelOrderBatch.

Websocket

- Deprecated 'snapshot' and 'snapshot_trades' in executions channel, use the newly added 'snap_orders' and 'snap_trades' parameters for extended control of snapshot data.
- The full changelog for API updates is available here.

NFT

Williams Racing - History in the Making

- We continued celebrating the rich history of Williams Racing in Formula 1 by offering Editions 3 & 4 of the History in the Making series of NFTs
- Edition 3 commemorates Alan Jones' win at the 1980 United States Grand Prix in the FW07B whilst Edition 4 celebrates the 2012 win by Pastor Maldonado at the Spain Grand Prix in the FW34
- Claims have already closed for Editions 3 and 4, but the final edition – Edition 5 – is available now! Log in to your Kraken account and visit the History in the Making page to claim yours.

Thank you!
